tunic, having the front section longer than the back.

The most expensive of frocks may be duplicated, as far as the trimmings are cerned, by the original use of fine Spring & Summer tache or rat-tail braid. The Empire Spring & Summer waist with gathered tunic as illustrated here is particularly chic developed in French voile or charmense satin. Taffeta is also in great demand for such costumes. When 44-inch material is used, 6 yards are needed for the entire costume, as the skirt is a circular ef-fect. Eleven yards of braid are re-quired for the trimming.

The back tunic section is shorter than the front, and both are placed on a lengthwise fold of the material, so that there will be no seam in either when finished. The back and collar are also laced on a lengthwise fold of the goods, while the sleeves and front are laid on a lengthwise thread. The fact that the sleeve has a dart seam, al-though it is a one-piece effect, requires particular care in cutting to preserve

The smaller sections of the pattern such as the under-arm gores, collar and stay are arranged on a lengthwise

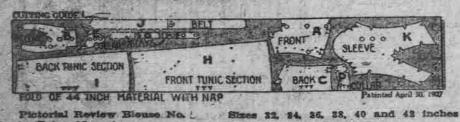

These Empire blouses are so dressy in effect that they can be worn with skirts of contrasting material, especially if developed in silk or satin. Blue and black are exceedingly popular, but there is also a strong demand for the rich shades of brown. In addition to the braid which outlines the blouse, narrow soutache is stitched upon the tunic and the blouse as a finish for the pockets. The belt looks equally smart in braid, taffets or leather, a simple buckle of good quality giving a pleasing touch to the finish.

CORRESPONDING WITH A STRANGER

Dear Miss Libbey :-

We are two young girls aged about seventeen and eighteen. We have both been corresponding with young men for over a year. Not long ago I re-ceived a letter from the one I am corresponding with. He said he could tell from my letters that I was a nice girl, and also that he had learned to love me. He is twenty-three. My girl friend's fellow is twenty-four. I have my friend's photo and he has mine. He wants me to marry him when he comes to see me in the spring.
